Twils Lounge has some upcoming novelties to showcase in Milan Design Week this year. On the occasion of iSalone 2019, the brand will be presenting its two collections titles Free and Share.

Both the collections set to be showcased during Milan Design Week consist of sets of free and modular chairs that are easily adaptable to the environment as well as to the needs of those who use it, by supporting any adaptation needed regarding both the needs of the customer and the amount of space available.

Free is one of the collections set to be shown during Milan Design Week 2019. This one is best defined as a deconstructed system, in which all of the seating elements consist of simple sommets which are supported by burnished metal feet whilst the backrests are free positioning. The elements are available in two depths and four widths, all with anti-slip support. What's peculiar about this set is the fact that the trapezoidal-shaped corner seats allow any person who sits in the sofas to create "islands of comfort with an unusual shape".

The second collection that will be showcased during Milan Design Week is Share. This collection has some thin volumes as well as some net profiles that define a modular system which is perfectly suitable for positioning in the center of any living room. This is due to the fact that the elements that compose it can easily be grouped and distributed to be in accordance with the available space of the room it's set in, which makes this a comfortable and versatile furniture piece.
